

Abstract of the Disclosure

A massively distributed database system and associated method are disclosed that utilize a multitude of widely distributed devices and advantageously provides increased storage capacity, availability, and throughput, and decreased latency, compared to existing distributed database architectures.